Baron Aviation

This jet charter company is based on an interesting concept, where you're not particularly chartering a plane but actually renting a service.

Making an entrance in 2011, Rajeev Wadhwa's Baron Eagle provides India's first Global Jet Card (make note: by invitation only), which can be utilised to fly domestic as well as international.

It pretty much works like a prepaid card where business jets are at your disposal with a certain number of flying hours against the amount of your membership fee.

You can access a fleet of 25 varied aircraft from which Baron Eagle has bought about 5,000 flying hours to provide their members with any size and kind of aircraft they could possibly need.

PS: The service has some killer perks like extreme personalisation, gourmet catering, a consulting relationship manager (to help you choose your aircraft), and a travel consultant (itinerary and bookings people!).
